

Gas Prices on the Rise in Regina

Higher than they should be

Reported By Bre McAdam
Posted April 7, 2010 - 4:24pm

Gas prices are on the rise in Regina, spiking on Wednesday from 101.9 to 103.9 at some stations around Regina. According to gas price analyst Roger McKnight, with the Canadian dollar on par with the American dollar we should be a few cents lower. "As far as gasoline prices are concerned, you should be around 102 I would say would be a pretty fair price." McKnight says when the Canadian dollar is low any price jumps are incredibly high. When the Loonie goes up, it slows down the increase in price. He also assures us that prices will not exceed one dollar eight cents per liter before or after the May long weekend.

