It is with a bit of sadness, mixed with great joy as we get ready to see our very own Molson Robertson head into retirement.

Molson has been with En-Pro for 19 years as our Sr. Cost Commodity Adviser. Molson has greatly contributed to the growth and success of our company, and he will be missed by all of us.

He will also be missed by all of the clients he worked diligently with over the years.

Molson attended McMaster University where he studied in the Arts program, and later attended Ryerson's Business Administration program before permanently entering the work force.

He spent several years in banking at Royal Bank's executive training program before going into the energy and commodities cost advising industry. Prior to joining En-Pro, Molson spent 22 years with an international consulting business where he held senior positions including Executive V.P. - G.M., in charge of Canadian operations.

When Molson brought his wealth of experience to En-Pro in 1992, his familiarity with all commodity areas, and in particular his expertise in deregulated natural gas and electricity markets, and the negotiation of major compressed gas contracts, allowed Molson to help build En-Pro's comprehensive Energy Services Analyst Training Program. Many of our junior and senior advisors have worked under Molson's excellent guidance.

And so it is with great joy that we wish Molson the best as he now has more time now to travel with his wife, and spend time with his family.

Please join me in congratulating and thanking Molson for a job well done. We will still be seeing him from time to time!

You will be missed, Molson. We wish you the very best.
